

Customer Routings Path Between Stations

Routings represent the transportation between manufacturing stations. The routes between stations display as lines with arrowheads spanning the distance between station connectors.

- Direct path as straight line with arrowheads spanning the distance between station connectors.
- Customer defined path as polylines with arrowheads spanning the distance between station connectors.

